

My pet: Jordan, spoiled, but ever so helpful

Jordan with owner Dipna Anand.

GOLDEN labrador Jordan is spoilt rotten and lives the life of Riley, according to his owner.

He is taken for drives, walks and is never short of a few doggie treats to chew on, but the six-and-a-half-year-old certainly earns his keep.

Dipna Anand, 21, of St Mary's Avenue, Norwood Green, has had Jordan since he was just four weeks old. Now he sleeps diagonally on her bed, forcing her to sleep on just a small part of it, and also has his own throne, a reclining leather chair in the living room, which no one else dare sit on.

But the friendly pooch does all he can for the Anand family, from passing them the television remote control to fetching them a bottle of water. Whatever they need, he can get.

And he knows how to butter up the head of the family, Gulu.

Whenever Mr Anand comes home after a hard day's graft running The Brilliant Restaurant in Western Road, Southall, Jordan is there to greet him.

Mr Anand believes the only reason Jordan does that is because he knows his treats, inevitably, are paid for by him.

Dipna said: "Jordan is really friendly. He loves meeting new people. Everyone always falls in love with him because he has a way with people. He must be one of the luckiest dogs because he gets treated like a king but he is really good because he does a lot for us in return."
